FILING OF CERTIFICATES.

Ruling on a Mooted Point Concerning Next Week's Election.

Elections will be held to-morrow in every incorporated town in the State, and on Tuesday will occur the elections in the cities except those operating under special charters. Of those working under charters, Fort Wayne is an exception, for it will elect a complete ticket Tuesday. The section of the election law requiring the filing of certificates of nomination fifteen days before the election is causing trouble in some towns. At Bainbridge neither party filed its certificates in time, and the present officials claim that there can be no election. At Alexandria and Redkey the letter of the law was also violated. In response to an inquiry from S. L. Wallace, of the Democratic State committee, Attorney-general Ketcham has given

"Dear Sir-You ask if where nominations of any political party have not been certified to the proper officers within fifteen days before the election, the board of election commissioners may, nevertheless, print the names of the nominees on the official ballot. It is my opinion that the fifteen days' limit s given for the protection of the election commissioners, and may be waived by them if they desire. Unless there is fraud or negect/of duty by the commissioners which prevents the certificates being filed in time, they cannot be compelled to print the names of the nominees. On the other hand, there s nothing in Section 53, or in any other part of the election law, to prevent their causing the names of the nominees to be printed on the ballot, where the certificate was filed too late, if they have reason to believe that such late filing was through the innocent mistake or excusable neglect of the officers charged with making the certifi-

DIDN'T TAKE THE ENGINEER.

He Wasn't Necessary on the Junket to Texas.

President Downing, of the Board of Works, and Controller Johnson have gone to Galveston, Tex., on a junket. The whole matter has been kept very quiet. The only intimation that such a trip was even contemplated was given by Mayor Taggart, presumably before he took a second thought, at the session of the cabinet last Friday. He remarked, when the subject of paving was under consideration, that some members of the Board of Works were contemplating a trip to see some pavements laid with creosoted blocks, but he closed up then and Laymen will wonder why Controller Johnson went on this trip, unless it is to insure the payment of the expenses. It is remembered that Controller Trusier refused to allow the expenses of the

MRS. SARAH MAY'S CLAIM. The Wife of the Architect Brings Suit

Against the State. In the Superior Court yesterday Sarah May began an action against the State of Indiana to recover $5,000, which she alleges is due the estate of her late husband, Edwin May, for services performed in 1860 in drawing up the plans for the State Prison North. Mrs. May avers that her husband was employed by John W. Blake, B. F. Mullen and John P. Dunn, who constituted the board of directors of the northern prison. The board, it is alleged, allowed architect May $5,000 for his services, and made an order for this amount. The plaintiff says she has repeatedly demanded payment of the proper authorities, and the same has been refused. She sues for judgment on the principal and interest which, it is averred, now amounts to $14,000.

She Will Not Accept a Settlement. the late Felix Deitch. The complaint was filed by Guilford A. Deitch against Irene Levy, daughter of the late Felix Deitch. The plaintiff demands an accounting of the defendant. He says that since March 15. 1892, he has been acting as her agent. Last January she asked for a settlement, and the agent accompanied her to the office of an attorney, and together they went over the books, the defendant assuring the plaintiff that the accounts were satisfactory. The plaintiff says he tendered the balance due the defendant, but she refused to accep and now questions the correctness of the accounts, and threatens to bring suit. The court is asked to decree an accounting be-tween the plaintiff and defendant, and to appoint a commission to take the evidence

Premier Steel Company Suit. There was quite an array of legal talent at the Hancock Circuit Court at Greenfield yesterday to argue a demurrer in the case of John McGettigan, receiver of the Premier steel works of this city, vs. Newland T. De Pauw et al. The amount involved in the suit is $800,000, and was venued there from Marion county. The attorneys for the receiver are Judge Byron K. Elliott, Ferd Winter, Judge A. C. Ayres, Smiley N. Chambers of Indianapolis, and R. A. Black of Greenfield. Representing the defense there were A. C. Harris and Charles W. Smith, of Indianapolis, and Marsh & Cook, of Greenfield. The case will be tried this term of court.

Suing the Bank Directors. To-morrow, in the Superior Court, Judge McMaster will begin the hearing of a case growing out of the Indianapolis Bank failure. It is the suit of William B. Prescott and Abner C. Wines against Theodore P. Haughey, Charles F. Meyer, R. B. F. Peirce, Harvey Satterwhite and Schuyler Colfax for $35,000 alleged to have been pro-cured from the plaintiffs. The defendants are the directors of the bank, and the claim is made that, by setting forth to the public that the bank was in a flourishing and solvent condition the money deposited im-mediately preceding the failure was obtained by the directors by fraudulent

She corroborated her husband's statements and admitted that Thorp's was the reigning image in her heart. She said she married Cory for a home and was tired of him. The court took the case under advisement.

AT THE ART EXHIBIT.

A Further Description of the Canvases to Be Seen.

A day or evening among the pictures now at the annual exhibit of the Art Association at Propylaeum Hall will reveal many canvases of interest. There is an almost infinite variety, and any one with the least taste or liking for pictures will find some to satisfy. There are large and small canvases, landscapes and interior views, the sea and the meadow and the little brook, portraits and any quantity of subjects with a story behind them. One of the most weird and peculiar pictures, which is just at the girls. left of the entrance, is called "Devotion," and is by the Chicago artist, Frederick Hansen. It shows a girl's face, with downcast eyes. The hair is parted in the middle and falls almost straight down each side of the face and over the bust, leaving a narrow line of face and neck. The color is one of extreme pallor and the hair is very dark. Mr. Hansen is considered one of the most versatile of the Chicago artists and paints no two things in the same way. The canvas on exhibition is marked by a strong indivdiuality and is unlike anything in the entire collection of more than two hundred

She has evidently come on some errand to wife and daughter are at the supper table. The whole furnishing of the simple apartment, the figures and the shy little maid at the door, tell a whole story at a glance. A very small canvas which hangs in group of three on the north wall is "In Dreams, Forgetting Her Daily Tasks," by W. Verplanck Birney. There is an old-fashioned room with a diamond-paned window.

On the seat below the window is the figure from which the name is taken. Through the open door is a vision of the countryside and the shadow of the doorway falls on the open door.

Two pictures that are fine character studies are by M. R. Dixon. One on the west wall is "The Idler." A child has been sent for water and has stoped on the hillside, where, flat on his back amid the grasses and flowers, he smiles in a happy-go-easy way. The soft colors of the Dutch garments and the greens, grays and blues of the land are a pleasing blending. The harsh material of which the garments are fashioned has been reproduced, and the earthen kruse, with its blue stripes, is true to the article. The flesh tints are fine, and the artist has put an expression on the face which tells better than words the enjoyment of the lazy hour taken by the child. The other picutre is "The Last Mouthful." As a tableau it possesses every requirement, and as a subject it has qualities of the amusing and the picturesque as well. The subject is a ragged girl, who has been eating from a bowl. She has come to the last mouthful. There is regret evident in her face and she is holding the spoon in her mouth as if she would like to bite it to get another taste of her food. The feet are covered with shoes from which most of the buttons have disappeared, and as she sits on the stool her toes are pointed in. She is a ragged and dirty child and a hungry one. Mr. Forsyth has a fancy posed portrait of Miss Julia G. Sharpe which artists will appreciate. It was painted at evening, with the light behind the head, evening, with the light benind the mead, which was against a yellow curtain. The features are admirable and the flesh tints are an exact reproduction of nature under such lights and shadows.

acter sketch by Francis P. Paulus. It the figure of a woman whose loosely folded hands in her lap have big joints and hard wrinkles and tough skin. The coarse clothes show she has not had much of this world's goods, and the dark red silk tie about her throat leaves the faint and pathetic impression that she would have liked to have had just a little more finery. In the face there is a look of oppression from hard labor, and yet with all this life of hard work, she could very well stand up for herself, and the one who would oppose her would get a piece of her mind. The reproduction of the woman on canvas shows many a masterly stroke. The same artist has two other pictures, one a "Twentieth Century Girl," a full-length figure in the rather picturesque dress of the period, and another called "Louise." By a large number of visitors it is thought that there is nothing better in the collection than "The Reader," by Frank E. Scott. It is one of the large pictures. It, too, shows a phase of life among the lowly. To the left of the center sits the grandmother. In her hand is the distaff of flax and before her is the wheel. On a straight bench near by sits the little granddaughter with a huge book resting across her knees. She is evidently reading to the old lady. The book is almost too heavy for her small strength, and yet she nobly does what is required of her. Edward Bell shows a decorative picture, "The Flower Gatherers." The colors are all delicate and in the center of the canvas are two figures of women in loose, classic garb, bending forward to pluck flowers. The Hitz Baking Company. Capital stock, $60,000. George Hitz is president, B. F. Hitz vice president and Charles F. Igelman secreyesterday growing out of the estate left by all delicate and in the center of the canvas There is a great display of arms, which seem to be entirely too long for the bodies. even in the awkward position in which they Another picture of the decorative sort is "The Voice of Spring," by Herbert Denman. The light colors are very pleasing, and the bit of landscape which forms the background for the figure would make a good picture alone. The subject is a young woman, nude to the waist, sitting on a very straight seat. One arm falls over the side and grasps a lyre. Back of her is a tree laden with pink blossoms, and in her other hand, which rests on the bench, is a great bunch of pink roses. The head is upturned, as if she were listening, and her large blue eyes have a far-away gaze, as if the "voice of spring" were distant. Mr. T. C. Steele has some of his characteristic soenes, "Late Afternoon on the Mississin-"The Mysterious River" and "An Autumn Sonnet," which are up to his usual high standard of work.

One of the odd pictures of the exhibit is "The Transit of Venus." The central portion of the canvas is a yellow disc and in relief across its face is the Venus, a piump maid, with red hair, which resembles the famous copy known as the "East Wind." The picture is conspicuous on account of its color. The picture was painted by A. J. Rapert, who has also "Moonlight, North Dakota." Rhoda Holmes Nichols, who is not a new contributor to the Art Association's exhibits, has a decorative piece, "A Pastoral." A tall aesthetic mald walks across a bit of landscape, with two dogs following. The dogs are of a wonderful breed, doubtless, for they have never existed in this part of the country and were probably made to order to suit the picturesque Philip Hale, whose engagement to Ethel Reid, the poster genius, was recently announced, is represented in the collection by a portrait of the well-known editor of Modern Art and a former resident of this city. Joseph M. Bowles. At a distance from the picture, which is on a small canvas, the ikeness and the effect is admirable, Close to, it shows that the impressionist school has been used as the means to the end. A study of the colors in this one picture wil of art than almost any other picture there.

Red, blue and green paint have been freely used and effects have thus been gained which in the olf or ordinary process is utterly impossible. The exhibit will be open do more to give an idea of the latest style

CORONER CASTOR RETURNS.

Shaken in the Belief that Holmes Killed Howard Pitezel.

Coroner Castor has returned to this city from Philadelphia, where he went at the request of H. H. Holmes. The latter seems anxious to convince the Marion county coroner that he did not commit the Irvington murder that is charged against him and to which he has confessed. Dr. Castor had three long interviews with the condemned murderer, and says, as a result of them, that he is a little shaken in his former be-lief that Holmes killed Howard Pietzel. Holmes declares that the confession was made simply to secure money with which to defend himself and that he is not guilty of any of the murders to which he confessed. A partial proof of this is the fact that newspaper investigation shows that some of the persons he claimed to have killed are still living.

Regarding the murder of Howard Pietzel Holmes attempts to prove an alibi. He gave a detailed account of himself during the time he was in this city with the Pietrel children. He said he started for the station with them and met Edward Hatch, to whom he gave the boy. Hatch he described as very much resembling himself. Holmes then accounts for his own doings up to the time he took a train for Chicago with the

THOSE TWO TOLL ROADS.

Warren Township Petition to Be Taken Up Next Week.

The County Commissioners expect to take up next week a petition of Warren township citizens to purchase the National road between Irvington and Cumberland and make it a free gravel road. There are also petitions requesting the board to buy the Pogue's run and Pleasant run roads, which traverse Warren township. These are the only toll roads in the county. The members of the board have not yet agreed among themselves that it is best to buy the roads. They say the purchase of the three pikes will entail an expense of from $5,000 to $7,000 on somebody. The law now permits the board to purchase toll roads with the county funds. Formerly an election had to be orroad run, and if the taxpayers voted to purchase, the expense was borne by the township. The commissioners may order an election under the new law, but the petitioners say that if the question is left to a vote of the township they will be defeated. They claim the people in the north and south ends of the township have their own free gravel roads and they will object to helping pay for roads that will not benefit them. The petitioners ask that the roads be purchased and paid for out of the general fund.

A Wheel with Bars Behind. The latest thing in the bicycle line is the Timms bleyele, which has been introduced into Indianapolis during the last week. It possesses the novelty of having the handle hars behind the saddle and the rider sits with his arms at his side, resting in a per-fectly natural, easy sitting posture. The tendency is to sit in an upright position, with the shoulders thrown back and the lungs fully expanded. The makers claim superfority over the old style of wheels, and it has been indorsed by many of the leading physicians of the city. The agency for Marion county has been secured by Morris Townley, of this city, and the wheels are on exhibit and sale at the temporary headquarters at 28 East Market street.
